ABS-CBN questions credibility of task force

By Di Lugo and Liza A. del Puerto

ABS-CBN YESTERDAY QUESTIONED the credibility of Task Force Ultra and reported its findings that blamed the organizers of "Wastewars" for the Feb. 4 stampede. The broadcast giant sought an investigation free of "conflict of interests," saying the task force had members who were "involved in the event"—an apparent reference to the Pasig City government and police. It also said that instead of coming up with facts, the task force team only delivered what it later admitted to be its personal opinion that ABS-CBN had "exploited, manipulated and treated its viewers like animals."

THE OFFICIAL DEATH TOLL IS 74—BUT ALSO more men and women died in a row deal as a consequence of Saturday's "Wastewars" stampede. A pregnant woman among the hundreds who managed to board and descend from the stage-top at the Philippine Arena, previously Ultra, was forced to have an abortion on Monday night at a government hospital, the woman learned yesterday.

When she brought to the Rizal Medical Center in Pasig City and was discharged home later, according to a social worker Elenita Maruya. She was in pain when brought back to the RMC on Sunday and was allowed to go home again after a checkup. By Monday though, she returned because of "continuous bleeding" and was finally admitted for an abortion to save her life, Maruya told in an interview. A resident of Santa Maria, Laguna, Rizal, the mother of four and wife of a construction worker but a 4-month-old kid, Maruya said. The patient was discharged at around 2:30 p.m. yesterday.

Cruel boss shatters Filipino maid's dream

SINGAPORE—CHERRY HAD LONG dreamed of this day. On her parents' small home in the lush Cagayan Valley of northern Luzon, she had imagined traveling to a place like Hong Kong or Singapore. And now, in April 2006, she had done it. Here she was in Singapore to begin a new phase of her life, working as a maid. "I thought Singapore was a very nice place because I could see all the trees and it was very clean... I'm happy because now my dream has come true. I told to myself," Cherry recalls. But her dream job rapidly turned into a nightmare—she barely leaves a working memorandum to the experiences of many other maids documented last year by New York-based Human Rights Watch in a report on Singapore's domestic helpers. Based on in-depth interviews with 16 maids of various nationalities, the rights watchdog says Singapore's maids suffer abuses including physical and verbal aggression, threats, restrictions on movement, abuse by agents, exorbitant debt payments, long work hours and lack of rest. Singapore's Ministry of Manpower called the report a gross misrepresentation. But Cherry says she suffered all of it. Trouble began the moment Cherry—now her real name—was her Singaporean agent after being driven into the city from Changi Airport. The contract she had signed with an employment agency in Manila promised a salary of $2,000 ($275) and at least two days off every month, she says. But the Singaporean maid agency told her the salary would be $2,200 with no days off—for two

It would be nice to find a Filipino designer."

Church, gov't team up in fight vs AIDS, finally

By Christian Y. Esguerra

THE LOCAL ROMAN CATHOLIC Church and the government yesterday agreed to one table their differences over strategies in a groundbreaking collaboration to fight the country's worsening problem with AIDS.

In a forum at the Manila Hotel yesterday, representatives of both sides agreed to end the long issue of educating the public on sexual abstinence instead of marriage and fidelity to one's partner within marriage, according to Ft. Alamo Pascual, executive director of Caritas Manila.

The said initiative was expected to have been done at an advance date as "a health secretary Francisco Duque III said in a press conference following the meeting arranged by the Asian United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS).

The collaboration, intended to participate in a film in the Philippines, was forged shortly after the release of a study showing that the number of persons with HIV/AIDS in the country had reached 100,000 in 2002 to 11,300 last year.

Using the "wordbook method" endorsed by the Church and the World Health Organization, the new study developed preliminary findings that judged the substance as a low of 2,000 up to a high of 50,000. Under the cooperation, the Church and the government would push abstinence methods as more appropriate than condoms.

"The Catholic Church's previous approach is in keeping with its traditional teaching which stresses that marriage should be restricted to marriage and that its purpose should be limited to the procreation of life," explained Fr. Robert Fiala, general secretary of the AIDS to Caritas International.

Fiala said this position was supported by studies abroad suggesting that the decision to believe that was primarily the result of sexual abstinence and fidelity to marriage.

"In many places, some governments and other organizations have adopted these two methods as their effective ways of preventing AIDS," he pointed out.

But the Catholic church opposes the governments from coming up with other decisions to prevent the spread of AIDS, he said.

"Perhaps, some governments are not as strict," he said, without mentioning the criticism of condom use.

In the past, the government often clashed with the Catholic Church for wanting to use condoms as a major measure to prevent AIDS in the

They were often designated as the first line of defense, often abstinence and fidelity. The church complained that the government had to unconsciously prohibit the idea of condom use because it was supposedly the easier to do.

The Church apparently disagreed with condoms that it said only in situations where sexual contact seemed unavoidable.

Starting again as a common strategy against AIDS, the Church and the government were now stepping up specific areas of cooperation instead of an arbitrary and government. The idea was to continue their respective efforts.

Condoms, on the other hand, has cost around 720 million for the purchase of condoms, according to figures. The top of the budget was the 720 million spent for the purchase of condoms last year, he said.

"We can integrate the risk through condom education and by increasing the number of voluntary counseling centers," he said.

Violent protests vs cartoons escalate

KARUL—AT LEAST TWO MORE AFGHANS were killed and 16 wounded on Wednesday in fresh protests against cartoons depicting Islam's most revered prophet that have enraged Muslims around the world.

Three of thousands of Muslims have demonstrated in the Middle East, Asia and Africa over the drawings, first published in Denmark, then Norway and then several other European countries. At least eight people have died in related violence.

We have died in Afghanistan alone, where protesters have turned their wrath on local authorities after their attempts to target Western institutions were thwarted.

UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon said, the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC) head its annual Islamic Summit in Bangkok, Thailand, where it will discuss the situation in the Middle East and the situation in the Muslim world.

However, Muslims, who are protesting the cartoons, have expressed their reluctance to discuss the situation in the Muslim world and the situation in the Muslim world.

According to "Islamic, economic and financial" of drawing the drawings of Muslim leaders as "people turned their own backs," Islamic Press Minister Ibrahim Khalil Hassan said on Tuesday evening in a dialogue with affected Muslims.

"We're facing a growing global crisis that has the potential to explode beyond the borders of governments and other authorities," he said.

In Afghanistan, an Islamic Summit about 100 protesters gathered in the town of Jalal, in western Kabul province, and clashed with police and set fire to at least one police vehicle.

When they moved towards a nearby US base in the area, Islamic militants, the provincial police chief, and officers were killed in open fire.

"I can confirm that two children were killed in the shooting, but died soon," he said, adding that other children were also wounded.

The 12 cartoonists were arrested in the Islamic Summit were reported to be in hiding, imprisoned and under police guard, but later, local, but not national, newspaper have had a competition to find the best Islamic cartoon.

The French cartoonist, Claude-François, who is a philosopher, expressed the cartoon, saying it was depicting the democratic rights of free expression.

French Muslim organizations had said to prevent the world from publishing the 12 cartoons and depictions of the Prophet Muhammad, for a court rejected their suit on Tuesday on a technicality.

The first page of the magazine carried a new cartoon of the Prophet Muhammad looking like a man in his family and saying:

"It's hard to be loved by kids." Islamic papers carried the French cartoon and an editorial explaining the decision to reprint them.

Although Muslims across the world did not respond and changed by the cartoon, the general reaction of Muslims in the Middle East has been to condemn and protest.

Egypt and Saudi Arabia, seen as the most religiously influential countries through the Arab world with large Muslim populations, have not welcomed the cartoon.

Analysts said Egypt and Iran, both at loggerheads with the West, would be hard to calm and where violent protests for political reasons.

After news of Danish publications in the weekend, the European Union presidency issued a warning to avoid worsening tensions across the Middle East and that they were obliged to prevent EU citizens from being harmed.

The Pope in Rome, Benedict XVI, said, "We believe in freedom of the press, in the responsibility of the media, and in the right of the faithful and people of all religions that we believe in the right to discuss and express the limits of personal prayer."

In Indonesia, the world's most populous Muslim country, government officials and religious leaders urged calm after Denmark said its newspaper intended to publish the cartoon.

2nd International Health and Hygiene Symposium

Better Health and Hygiene: Today's Challenges, Tomorrow's Hopes

HEALTH AND HYGIENE CHALLENGE: FAST-TRACKING PROMOTION

The importance of promoting health and hygiene as development intervention will be the main focus of discussion as some 150 health and hygiene professionals from seven countries meet in Manila from February 9-10, 2009 for the 2nd International Health and Hygiene Symposium.

The symposium theme "Better Health and Hygiene: Today's Challenges, Tomorrow's Hopes" makes strong reference to the United Nations Millennium Development Goals which include sanitation and hygiene in the Plan of Implementation, and the global community's acknowledgement of the importance of health and hygiene promotion as development intervention.

Hosted by Procter & Gamble (Safeguard Philippines, Inc. (P&G) through its flagship brand Safeguard, the symposium, which is a follow through to the first one held in Beijing, China last July 2007, then hosted by the Safeguard Research Institute of Family Health and the China Ministry of Health, will be attended by key scientific and government thought leaders from China, Russia, Pakistan, Mexico, Singapore, USA and host country, the Philippines.

Philippine Health Secretary Francisco T. Duque is expected to address the global challenge of health and hygiene promotion, education and intervention to improve the health, well-being and economic productivity of the population.

The two-day symposium's objectives are to share scientific data and knowledge on the importance and effectiveness of good hygiene practices in preventing and controlling diseases; and to exchange hygiene education and promotion program experience among participating countries, especially where public and private sector collaboration are concerned.

Hosting this important international gathering is made more significant for Safeguard as it celebrates its 40th year in the Philippines. Safeguard added a new dimension to health and hygiene when it was introduced to Filipino families in 1968. It has become a Philippine institution in hygiene promotion and education having successfully partnered with PRREIT, UNICEF and DOST, among others, for school and community hygiene intervention.

Aside from providing a strong communication platform with health and hygiene experts from developed and developing countries, the symposium also raises awareness of the importance of basic personal hygiene such as proper hand washing and bathing. The World Health Organization (WHO) reports that nearly 40% of the world's population (2.4 billion) have no access to hygienic means of personal sanitation resulting in the deaths of millions of people, including children, from various diseases caused by inadequate sanitation.

WHO believes that increasing access to sanitation and improving hygiene behavior are key to reducing this burden of disease.

Symposium participants are expected to develop proposed action plans for governments, non-government organizations, the scientific community and private sector to commit to reducing the many daily hygiene practices and conditions among people especially in developing countries and turning this commitment into reality.

40 YEARS OF SAFEGUARD: Sustainability In Action

The concept of sustainable development as a way to ensure better quality of life for everyone is an effort that businesses, government and non-government organizations are increasingly embracing. While many have their own ideas about sustainable development or what a better quality of life means, Procter & Gamble (P&G) has taken it as an opportunity to responsibly leverage its products and innovations for the benefit of everyone.

P&G

From the beginning, P&G's embrace of sustainable development has been based on the company's vision that it can grow business by bringing to the marketplace innovations and technologies that touch the lives and improve the quality of life of consumers. It is this vision that brought Safeguard to the Philippines. Its introduction to the country in 1968 added a new dimension to family health and hygiene among Filipino consumers. It brought to life the "ownership" of filipino mothers and sparked consciousness for better family hygiene. Today, Safeguard continues to be the nation's health partner and an evolution in health and hygiene promotion.

P&G has chosen to focus on health and hygiene as part of its sustainability effort because it has a significant impact on its consumers. For 40 years, Safeguard P&G's flagship brand, has been at the forefront in health and hygiene promotion in the country.

Safeguard's health and hygiene promotion efforts stem from the fact that while the provision of sanitation and hygiene facilities is vital to improving health and hygiene in families, schools and communities, it does not necessarily mean that people are then effectively. It does not ensure that the prevalence of infectious diseases automatically decreases.

People need to be made aware of proper hygiene practices.

It is a message worth passing on.

educational initiative to promote hygiene in 2002. At that time, P&G Philippines president and general manager, said "It is Procter & Gamble, through Safeguard, have made the promotion of good hygiene habits among Filipinos a priority. Safeguard's vision is to help a healthier nation. We have been implementing our educational message: Practicing proper hygiene habits, with soap that provides superior protection against germs, helps families stay healthy."

In 2003, P&G, UNICEF and five other agencies, namely the Philippine Association of Medical Technologists (PAMT), the Department of Education and Culture, the Department of Health, the Philippine Hospital Association and NRP, the national association of broadcasters, formed an alliance to undertake a National Health and Hygiene Program under a project called Kalusap, Kalusap, Kalusap (K3K). The project aims to reduce the incidence of hygiene-related diseases through proper hygiene education in schools and communities. The program highlights the importance and practice of the Three Steps to Good Health: Hand washing, bathing and keeping the surroundings clean which is recognized as the simplest yet most cost-effective way to prevent diseases.

Today, Safeguard continues to create a strong bond with Filipino consumers, teaching and improving their lives through co-learning programs like Agapang Safeguard, Agapang Mula sa Pamilya, Safeguard-UNICEF Handing 20kg Operation (H2O) for school children and Handing Safeguard Mother's Love (HMSL) for school children and the youth, among others.

As it celebrates its 40th year of health and hygiene promotion in the country, Safeguard, together with the NRP organizations composed of PAMT, the Philippine Hospital Association and the National Confederation of Barangay Health Workers, is hosting the 2nd International Health and Hygiene Symposium. To celebrate its 40th year together with Filipino families, Safeguard brings back the K3K Program, and once again, brings attention to the basic household hygiene practices of hand washing and bathing through family hygiene education programs in schools and barangays. Hand washing and bathing are recognized as simple, cost-effective ways to protect the family.

Tug-of-war for cash found in stampede

By Oliver C. Sando Jr.

TWO DAYS AGO, THE DANGEROUS TUG-OF-WAR between the Philippine Air Force and the Philippine Army over the cash found in the stampede at the Philippine Arena in Baguio City last Saturday.

The story would have ended there except that the cash found in the stampede was not the money that the Philippine Air Force had found in the stampede. It was the money that the Philippine Army had found in the stampede.

Villanueva lifts Bulls past Giants in Game 1

By Jane Hansen

ROGER VILLANUEVA CUT DOWN THE PURSUITING GIANTS down to size in overtime for a 137-102 Red Bull victory at the start of the San Miguel Coffee PBA Finals Conference Finals last night at the Araneta Coliseum.

The bull strong Villanueva outplayed Arnie Murodo by pumping better shots of his team's 18 points in the overtime period in clutch two game-winning shot down with 2:23 time remaining.

Ray Castillo came off the bench with back-to-back three-pointers as the Giants trailed within 120-104, but Red Bull failed to ground to take the lead at 11:40 active quarter.

The Giants continued at 11 point deficit to send the game into overtime at 99-92, but Red Bull's high 22 offensive points were enough to turn the tide.

With their Giants' 18 points, the Bulls were back a half-point winning probability since 36 out of 14 shots which were the first game of a semi-finals championship series on a single title.

Villanueva finished with 28 points and 12 rebounds, combining with James Frazier and Arnie Murodo to give Red Bull a 120-96 lead with 17 seconds left in the second period.

Between 100 and 100 shots in each of the first half, when they combined 13 shot allowed the Bulls to take a 40-41 halftime lead.

Early half, the Bulls' magical shot with a 100-96 victory over Murodo, Castillo in a line-up of three to check their place after.

"I felt like we're on the verge of making the Finals to beat last season's Bulls. The first line-up of three to check their place after."

The victory marked the Bulls' first in their second night since after leading third in the 2002 National Athletic Finals and Game 1.

UAAP nixes DLSU cage leave plan

By Jocelyn W. Pags

WHILE A MEMBER CAN TAKE A LEAVE OF absence, it should not be from one sport arena to another.

The order was issued by the UAAP board president when it turned down the La Salle University's proposal to stop one basketball season to the end of the eligibility season that started the scheduled 2006-2007 season.

"While recognizing the right of every member to university to take a leave of absence, the board likewise took cognizance of the fact that basketball is a compulsory sport, which every member university must participate in," the board said. It is a unanimous after an emergency meeting at Casa Lupa.

The board stressed that La Salle may still take a leave of absence from the UAAP basketball season, but the university must file a leave of absence from all 14 sports covering the men, women and junior divisions.

"Any member school has the right to take a leave of absence from the UAAP," said Dr. R. M. Moring, UAAP executive secretary. "But if one member has to take a leave of absence, it has to be for the entire of the UAAP."

Last Jan. 21, La Salle filed a one-year leave of absence from the men's basketball season.

La Salle officials said the move was part of the school's attempt to extend its cage program rolled by the eligibility season involving Ateneo de Manila and the UAAP.

However, UAAP officials said a member school cannot pull out of one of its sports programs—basketball and volleyball.

"We are now leaving it to the hands of the La Salle to decide if it would continue with its leave [which should be accepted]," added Moring.

The same statement also stated that the eligibility season involving La Salle would not be moved any time soon, noting that the UAAP board "would be giving the report of the fact-finding committee in its next regular meeting last week month."

The league stated earlier that the meeting committee would submit its decision and recommendations by the end of February. However, among the possible scenarios the league could impose on La Salle due to the eligibility cover-up. "Earlier years ago, the UAAP also dropped a one-year suspension on Ateneo for failing to report Moring Aquino in the men's basketball season due to academic deficiencies."

Ecozones in Mindanao

DISCARDING THE LACK OF infrastructure facilities was a major problem that discouraged investors from doing business in Mindanao. The cost of infrastructure and communication was too high.

Infrastructure in place

That problem is not nearly a deterrent to the point, as there are still a lot more to be done. However, the situation now is a lot better than what it was. Road network, airports, seaports, telecommunications and other facilities are now in place. These improvements did not only cut the cost of doing business in Mindanao, but also made it more convenient and profitable.

Creating more investments has always been a tough challenge for the government and the private sector. Even if the regulated facilities were in place, they have to contend with the "hemp problem" of Mindanao, particularly with regard to the peace and order situation. But these constraints are being addressed through appropriate investment promotion and acquisition strategies.

The strategies in promoting Mindanao as an investment destination are consistent with the overall investment promotion program of the country. One of these is the creation of economic zones.

As defined in Republic Act 7916, or the Special Economic Zone Act of 1995, economic zones are defined areas with highly developed or to be developed into agro-industrial, industrial townships, commercial, residential, banking, financial and financial centers.

Investment incentives are one of the following: industrial estates, export processing zones, free trade zones, and manufacturing centers.

The law states that "the government shall actively encourage, promote, induce and accelerate a sound and balanced industrial, economic and social development of the country in order to provide jobs to the people operally close to the rural areas, increase their productivity and their individual and family income, and thereby improve the level and quality of their living conditions through the establishment of special economic zones in suitable and strategic locations in the country."

Among the privileges granted to economic zones under RA 7916 is exemption from national and local taxes.

Mindanao economies

There are 11 economies in Mindanao that were registered with the Philippine Economic Zone Authority (PEZA).

In Western Mindanao, the 90-hectare Ayala de Zamboanga City is ready for location, preferably light to medium scale, non-polluting industries.

In Northern Mindanao, the 10,000-hectare Inland Zone in Jasaan, just north of Zamboanga City, is ready for location, preferably light to medium scale, non-polluting industries. Development is still under way as the first Chapter in the Inland Zone is in the process of being developed.
